

Info@PomdPom.com

As old age claims us

As old age claims us the body ripens, rots to its core
The husk of flesh desiccated and frail
Pain is a partner forever present in some small part
Flaring, grabbing attention without warning
Greedy for our conscious it gnaws at the bone
Patiently accept the spikes and the aches
Cherish each good day free from Pain