

It seems I died once before

It seems I died once before - January 27 2013

It seems I died once before at a time without conviction
I rose through the depths that tore at me
Lifted by both your loves I returned
And I triumphed in this unlikely resurrection

Each day brings joy and laughter
Memories tug at this pleasure
Some dark with pain and rancour
But most are bright with love and rapture

Less and less Doubt and guilt gnaw at my peace
Drag me back to days dark and cold
Wrapt in blankets not my own
Wraithed with snaking coils of clear dark menace
Imprisoned by a flesh shorn of fight
To lie dormant through day and night
Whilst Inside this shell a battle raged
As blood renewed and I was remade
Yet many fell and failed this test
Lost this life and laid to rest
To say they haunt me would be too strong
But give cause to reflect on this wrong
And pause and thank those who love and still support me
As January dawns in drizzle but sets in splendid sun
I thank the heavens that I have so much
